

June 8, 2009

Farley Printing receives FSC Certification

Farley Printing Company is pleased to announce that it has received Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) chain-of-custody certification. Using certified papers is part of the FSC's world-wide efforts to promote environmentally appropriate, socially beneficial and economically viable management of the world's forests.

FSC's model of certification allows products that flow from certified forests to enter the marketplace with a credential that is unique. Any FSC labeled product can be traced back to a certified source. This aspect of the system is the basis for any credible certification system and is the link between consumer preference and responsible, on the ground forest management.

To earn this certification, Farley Printing Company underwent a rigorous process that encompassed a site audit of its policies and procedures, records, paper usage and product labeling. Certification in the program expands and acknowledges Farley Printing Company's dedication to the environment and sustainability practices in its production facility. The certification process was performed by SGS, an independent third-party certifier of environmental and sustainability claims.

Farley Printing Company has been using FSC papers for years but just recently achieved certification.

Jobs printed on certified papers may bear the logo and trademarks of the FSC organization subject to the graphic standards of the sponsoring organizations.

For any questions or comments please contact:

Joseph Farley, Jr.

302.656.4466 x102

jfarley@farleyprinting.com

www.farleyprinting.com